Women's basketball is finally making the big time. The 1976 Olympics in Montreal had women's basketball competition for the first time and the U. S. team won the Silver Medal. Lusia Harris of Delta State (winner of three straight national titles) was drafted by the New Orleans JAZZ of the N.B.A. Miss Harris however declined the tryout. Madison Square Garden has scheduled a four team tournament January 1 and 2, 1978. Last March, Carol Blazejowski, a five foot ten inch forward from Montclair (New Jersey) State scored fifty-two points in the Garden before a crowd of twelve thousand. Delta State plays Louisiana State December 30, 1977 in the Superdome in New Orleans. The 805 member Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women reported that 773 member schools offered basketball programs. Last year, 265 members offered scholarships in basketball for women. That figure is up from only 49 in 1974-75! Queens College (New York) also will host a holiday festival December 27 thru 29 with eight teams from across the nation competing. As Coach Wade of Delta State says, "there is so much more now. A girl in high school who plays basketball can now get her education through a basketball scholarship. There's an incentive to keep playing." Locally U.S.C. can expect to field a fine team this year.

Even wonder if you should have taken your tennis more seriously? A check of this year's tennis earnings shows that Jimmy Connors has only earned $652,657 thus far but that puts him ahead of Guillermo Vilas, ($416,798), Bjorn Borg ($318,532) and Ille Nastase ($276,965). Chris Evert leads the women in earnings with $503,134 followed by Navratilova ($300,317) and Wade ($254,926) and if you're curious, Billie Jean King has won $186,149 in semi-retirement.

Basketball season is upon us and Basketball weekly lists its teams thusly: 1) North Carolina, 2) Notre Dame, 3) Marquette, 4) Kentucky, 5) Syracuse, 6) Cincinnati, 7) UCLA, 8) Las Vegas, 9) Detroit, 10) Louisville, 11) San Francisco, 12) Arkansas, 13) Utah, 14) Purdue, 15) Wake Forest. Rounding out the top 25 are 16 16) St. Johns, 17) Long Beach, 18) Princeton, 19) Holy Cross, 20) Duke, 21) Alabama, 22Z) Indiana State, 23) Creighton, 24) Washington State and 25) Providence. If memory is correct Basketball Weekly picked Marquette number one last year in its pre-season poll.

Its interesting to note that many of the big names in last spring's high school recruiting wars are attending schools which were not in the NCAA final 32 teams last year. Albert King (Maryland), Gene Banks (Duke), Wayne McKoy (St. John's) Earvin Johnson (Michigan State), Darnell Valentine (Kansas) and Jeff Ruland (Iona) will all be heard from however.

If you have thought about jogging or running and are now ready to make an investment in the proper shoes, take a look at the October, 1977, issue of Runners World. Their Third Annual Shoe issue will tell you everything you wanted to know about running shoes but didn't know who to ask. The Runners World Shoe Survey tested and rated training shoes, racing shoes, spikes and womens' shoes. The Brooks Vantage was rated the top training flat with the Adidas runner second. In racing flats, the Nike Elite was a clear choice for number one. It's at least worth a glance, but your feet will have to make the final decision.

Gallaudet 16 — Virginia Commonwealth 12. It looks like any other football score but the story is somewhat more interesting. Gallaudet College is the world's only Liberal Arts College for the Deaf. Located in Washington, D. C., the school has recently rejuvenated its football program by hiring Paul Smiley, a former University of Maryland Assistant Coach. Gallaudet's offense consists of 12 men. The eleven men on the field are aided by a twelfth man who beats the cadence for the snap of the ball on each play. The players on the field feel the vibrations and know by prior arrangement when the ball will be snapped. To keep opposing teams from anticipating beats, Gallaudet players shift the line after one of the beats. This year the team averaged over 250 yards rushing per game. Gallaudet played Stoney Brook College several weeks ago and led 13-0 at halftime only to lose 22-13.

"The thing is they beat us, but they didn't beat us 59-0 like the scores in the past," said Coach Smiley.

Smiley said one of the best things the football program shows is that deaf people can do anything.

"People that graduate from this college are in all walks of life" he said.

"They can do anything and football is no exception. And if anybody thinks deaf people can't play football, I'd like them to come here and line up against Mr. Fitzpatrick."

Fitzpatrick, a 6'2" 255 pound defensive guard is being scouted by the Pros.

Quotes of the Week:

Dan Evans, former governor of Washington: "You can measure the value of being governor — it's 33 yards. I used to sit on the 50-yard line at the University of Washington football games. Now I sit on the 17."

Coach Ron Mayer, after Southern Methodist drew a record low of 6,923 fans to the Cotton Bowl for its game against Rice: "I didn't realize we had that many loyal fans."

Coach Pepper Rodgers, asked to explain Georgia Tech's 20-16 loss to Navy: "Maybe we just weren't good enough. Have you ever thought about that?"

Former Marquette Coach Al McGuire when asked about new Marquette Coach Hank Raymond's worrisome nature: "If he were married to Raquel Welch," McGuire said, "he'd expect her to cook."

The American family will survive the Equal Rights Amendment but it may have a bit more trouble coping with a new policy at the Air Force Academy.

According to rules announced last week, an unmarried pregnant student who does not resign has to take an extended leave. After the child is born, she may return to classes only if she is still single and has no legal obligation to support the child. This means she will either have to give the child up for adoption or make someone else its guardian.

The academy's pregnant students were once expelled if they refused to resign. The policy was changed when Pentagon officials began to fear the policy was unconstitutional and might not stand a test in court.

The Air Force Academy is not planning to change its ban on married students. Officials believe the rigors of life at the academy leave too little time to maintain "a normal and harmonious marriage." Pregnancy, unlike marriage, is seen as a temporary disability which doesn't prevent the resumption of military training.

Other service academies still drop pregnant students, as well as prospective fathers and students legally obligated to support a child.

In February 1974, New York City's Fire Commissioner John T. O'Hagan said he saw "no physical or mental impediment to a woman being a firefighter." In February, 1975, he announced, "We will be opening the examinations to females." On Dec. 3, he will finally get around to doing it."

There are 32,000 applicants for "a few thousand" job openings, Hagan says. Only about 100 of them are women.

The examination will include mental and physical tests. As part of the physical exam, candidates of both sexes will have to pick up a 100-pound weight and run with it. "If they pass the tests and they come on," he says of the women, "they'll be operating the nozzle and pulling ceilings and doing everything else all the other firefighters do. There'll be no accommodations made."

We doubt if the ladies in New York would want any accommodation. However, they may wish the Commissioner hadn't waited so long to open the examination to them.

Like Osceola, ole J. Geils is going through some changes. J. Geils has formed a new band called (surprise!) GEILS and will appear at the Carolina Coliseum November 28 performing their new album "Monkey Island."

The Smell of the Crowd

By BENNIE LEE SINCLAIR

When I went to the circus as a child it was to Ringling Bros. three ring extravaganza. I was confused by all the acts going on at one time, awed by the great crowds of audience, and terrified by the stories whispered around me of the big tent fire where so many had recently died.

I did not by choice go to a circus again, until just a few weeks ago when a much smaller and lesser known version — Hoxie Bros. one-ringer — played at Travelers Rest, a few miles below my mountain home. Hoxie sounded as rinky-tink as Ringling did grandiose, and the fact that Jim Pitts, assistant chaplain at Furman University, was a secret circus buff who acted as a front man for Hoxie, only made it all the more intriguing. My husband was easily convinced and off we drove in a vaguely general direction, not knowing a location or time other than the "tonight, Travelers' Rest", we had heard from the neighbors.

Travelers Rest, of course, isn't all that big, and when we drove toward the lights and sound we ended up parking at the back of a field, only a quarter mile or so off target. As we started walking toward the music, a couple of stray dogs joined us and raced delightedly in circles around us. When what in the dark looked like a horse tethered to a tree turned out to be a camel, we knew we were getting there. Then we crossed between the dozens of campers the circus people travel in, stepped into the path of a young elephant and his trainer who was making a few quick bucks before show time selling rides, and hurried on through a maze of wagons into the midway. Crowds, jostling, cotton candy, noise — the difference being that a few hundred feet from and above us a high-trapeze act was in progress, under the stars, in the open. It was breathtaking. Figures in white tights and sequins swung back and forth in the night, lights following their movement to music, stars a perfect backdrop. How beautiful — I thought — not to be under a tent. It wasn't until we saw the second act that I learned that the tent, supposedly one of the biggest and best ever made, had blown away a few states ago. But the show goes on.

First, we visited the side-shows, which consisted of "Miss Electra" who could light lightbulbs, etc. with her touch; and "El Diablo", a college - kid - type who ate fire; a pair of babboons and their baby; a sleepy lion; a bored tiger, a pensive llama, some ponies, and some baby elephants, not to mention the main attraction, MONGO THE GORILLA, who looked sleepy, bored, and pensive. Then into the circus itself, past Jim Pitts incognito as ticket-taker. Lawdy — in came the stray dogs who had followed us across the field, doing their act now as part of "Paulette's Peerless Puppies — Amazing Animal Actors From The Canine Corps" and there was Miss Electra as one of the Diaz Sisters ("Terrific Team of Astoundingly Agile Artists") as — was it Miss Graciella? After "The Edmundo Troupe" had terrified us with their high-wire bike act, they reappeared as "The Flying Colombians" to do the finale trapeze act we had seen from outside. Michael Cecere — "World's Youngest Lion Tamer" — grunted and hissed at a penfull of adoring beasties. A Miss Herriott appeared with Prancing Military Ponies, then as Laura Walker went through some paces with elephants, and then as Laura Herriott Caudill rode American Anthem, The Wonder Horse through an equestrienne routine. Yo-YO the Unrideable Burro and some clowns did some tricks (I do not doubt for a minute that the clowns consisted of the Diaz sisters, Laura Herriott Walker Caudill, Cecere, the Edmundo/Colombians, and perhaps Mongo).

Hoxie Bros. is owned by one Hoxie Tucker and his showgirl wife Betty: no bros. Though it has been featured by Playboy and National Geographic, it remains about as unpretentious as a showbix organization can be. Amateurs infiltrate the ranks (as fire-eaters and magicians) and circus buffs rub shoulders with hardnose pros (as ticket-takers and advance men). If the tent blows away, so be it: and if it rains sans tent (as it did the day following my visit) alot of wet troupers, puppies, and ponies go through their paces.

I went to Hoxie as a circus skeptic, having been turned off as a child by The Greatest Show On Earth. When I left a couple of hours later, cutting across the field and again accompanied by an assortment of Paulette's Peerless Puppies, I realized that I felt happier than I had in a long time. Hoxie is as grassroots as Grand Ole Opry before it got big, and magical as Ringling has never been. If ever it comes your way, chuck reason to the winds and go. If you only know the general direction, its lights and music will take you the rest of the way.

"Green Pond" Opening in New York

The distinctive flavor of alligator meat is one of several pleasant surprises encountered by the four young characters of "Green Pond," shown in a scene from last spring's production by Stage South, the state theatre of South Carolina. The show, which features music by Walterboro, S. C. native Mel Marvin, is being presented in New York later this month by the Chelsea Theatre Center. (Stage South photo)

"Green Pond," which had its world premiere earlier this year as a production of Stage South, the state theatre of South Carolina, is scheduled to be presented in New York beginning later this month.

The Chelsea Theatre Center will open the show November 22 at its Brooklyn theatre facility. Following two weeks of performances in Brooklyn, "Green Pond" will move to the Chelsea Westside in Manhattan, December 7 through December 18.

David Chambers, who directed the State South production, will also direct the four-member Stage South cast in the New York production.

Dick Goldberg, Stage South producer, expressed the excitement of the staff of the state theatre, which is a program of the South Carolina Arts Commission:

"This announcement marks another important milestone in the development of professional theatre here in South Carolina," Goldberg said. "We all may be proud of the fact that our state theatre, after only four years of existence, has assembled a production that can be taken into the highly competitive and demanding New York theatre world.

"Such an accomplishment is even more significant," Goldberg continued, "when we remember that 'Green Pond' was developed through the state theatre."

"Peter, Walk on the Water" is one of two traditional spirituals from the Johns Island area sung during "Sea Island Song," a production of South Carolina's state theatre, Stage South. In this scene, Evelina Johnson sings to her husband Pete while the Gate Spirit (rear, played by Stephen Bordner of Columbia) looks on. Characters in the show also include the Johnsons' friend Maytag Diamond Ashley (left) and their three faithful hounds. "Sea Island Song" will be performed Friday and Saturday afternoons at the Booker T. Washington Center, located at the corner of Wheat and Marion streets in Columbia.

EDITOR, OSCEOLA:

There is so much beauty in S.C. I am sure you could have photographers who could have filmed happier scenes for your October 28 edition. I found it depressing and irritating. This probably classifies me as dull & middle class. My only recourse to this is to prefer not to renew my subscription to Osceola.

Sincerely,
Mrs. R. F. Borgman

EDITOR, OSCEOLA:

Before Dan Klores, writer of "McGuire's changing fortunes" (Osceola, Nov. 11, 1977) begins making judgements on South Carolina basketball and Conway, I would suggest he spend more time acquainting himself with his subject matter.

I was personally affronted by Klore's derogatory reference to Conway in the lead paragraph of the article.

"There are numerous things wrong with Frank McGuire' being offered a position as administrator of USC's regional campuses athletic programs, not the least of them is the droll sight of envisioning him residing in Conway and being forced to retire before his contract legally expires," wrote Klores.

I do not know if Klores, a New Yorker, has ever visited Conway but I can assure him residents of this fine city do not consider it to be droll as Klores suggests. Conway is a vibrant, alive community which has much to offer its citizens and potential residents.

I thought I was being overly sensitive about the slap in the face given Conway but as I read the article it became increasingly evident that Klores has not really done his homework. Although the Osceola editor identified the piece as Klore's personal opinion, that does not excuse the irresponsible journalism displayed in the article. Much of the writing appears to be based on rumor and innuendo. The story's credibility is undermined by Klore's failure to substantiate his suppositions.

I would agree with Klores that Frank McGuire has received a dirty deal. But I can think of much worse fates than living in Conway (New York is one). Osceola failed its readers by printing Klores' personal opinions in a news format.

Sincerely yours,
Steve Robertson
Conway, S.C.

EDITOR, OSCEOLA:

Just last week I renewed my subscription to Osceola. Now comes another issue burdened with more weeping and wailing from the typewriter or that much abused and maligned immigrant from New York, Mr. Ed Meadows.

It is unlikely that many Osceola readers disagree with his assessment of parochial and provincial Columbia. Of course Columbia is a rural backwater. But comparing it to New Orleans is like comparing Louisville to San Francisco. Mr. Meadows' tirades and rhetorical flourishes quickly grow exceedingly tiresome and boring. Or does he in some perverse way actually enjoy enduring the tortures of living in such intellectual and cultural squalor?

The man lacks imagination not to mention journalistic sense. Mention Panama Canal or welfare and fools from across South Carolina promptly take pen in hand and dispatch letters to The State dripping with venom. Mr. Meadows is no different. Mention Columbia and in the best Pavlovian fashion another emotional vendetta leaps from the pages of Osceola. He is alot like Senator Thurmond; he thinks with his glands.

Mr. Meadows appears to have been a product of the Whining School of Journalism. He carps and complains but little more. He rarely reveals himself as a commentator worthy of a weekly column. When does he shed new light on an issue? When does he offer a different or a unique insight into a problem? The column seems to be a vehicle that affords him the opportunity to vent his anger and frustration. That maybe good therapy for Mr. Meadows but it does not do much to illuminate the minds of his readers.

Several weeks ago Osceola distributed its Dubious Achievement Awards. Why didn't Mr. Meadows receive "The Bill McDonald Excellence in Writing Award" for the most persistent use of the pronoun "I" in his columns? Surely there is no columnist in this or the adjacent 47 states who refers to himself more frequently in his columns — unless it is the above mentioned Mr. McDonald.

Incidently, I too was in New Orleans last week and by God I would rather live there than in South Carolina. However, Bourbon Street is as crassly and grossly commercial as anyplace in America except perhaps Times Square in Mr. Meadows' Holy of Holies. Mr. Meadows should also be informed that the PBS station in New Orleans is censoring Masterpiece Theater's I Claudius so that the citizenry of the Crescent City will not be subjected to its more salacious interludes.

If Mr. Meadows is under the illusion that Columbia has a monopoly on cultural deprivation, then it might behoove the readers of Osceola to take up a collection and buy the man a Continental Trailways ticket so that he can visit such outstanding urban centers of cultural splendor as Richmond, Toledo, Des Moines, Omaha and Memphis.
